Welcome Mayor Evans

By a unanimous vote, at a Special City Council meeting on July 29, 2013, the Prospect City Council elected John Evans mayor. Mayor Evans is no neophyte to the job; he served as Mayor of Prospect from 1981 to 1984. City Attorney, City Council Member and City Clerk, all in the City of Prospect, are also on his resume and add up to twenty years of experience in Prospect government.

John has lived in Prospect for thirty seven years. At first he lived in Fox Harbor, but for the past thirty four years he has called Hunting Creek home.

City Attorney, Grover Potts administers the Oath of Office to Prospects newest Mayor, John Evans

During his first term as mayor John initiated the July 4th tradition of a citywide celebration to mark Independence Day. The first fireworks were set off by the Harrods Creek Fire Department. The firefighters spent an entire day learning just what needed to be done to set off fireworks in a safe manner. Then, on July 4th the fire fighters put on a spectacular show in a field now full of houses and known as the Estates of Hunting Creek. There were activities for young and old alike; one of the most amusing was the egg toss and some of the contestants' expressions are memorable! The prizes even included watermelons. At the end of the fireworks display, it was a weary group that trudged back to their cars, laden with folding chairs, picnic baskets and even a few sleeping children, but I can still recall numerous comments about the fun of a "good old fashioned 4th" of July – and right here in Prospect!

Our new mayor has lost no time acquainting himself with the business of the City of Prospect. He has studied the budget, cast a fresh eye over City Hall, and had a meeting with the representatives of the Ohio River Bridges project. He presided over the August 5, 2013 City Council Meeting.....the very meeting at which he was elected Mayor.

Remembering Mike

Prospect residents were stunned to hear of the very sudden death of Council Member Mike Scott on Friday, July 12th. Mike will always be remembered for his friendly smile and his dedication to the needs of his constituents. His desire to help others was evident right up to the moment of death when he was walking with a visually impaired friend. Mike was a rather quiet person who was always giving; and for whom the reward of his kindness and generosity was not accolades nor honors, but the satisfaction that he had helped someone or contributed to the success of something worthwhile. Mike's term as president of Wayside Christian Mission Board of Directors is a perfect example of the kind of service that was so very important to him.

Mike's son, Jim, spoke of the question he posed to his dad when much to his surprise he learned that Mike was a candidate for Prospect City Council. He willingly shared Mike's response that Prospect had been such a good com- Continued on page 5

munity for his family he felt the need to give back in whatever way he could, and serving on the City Council appeared to be a way to do that.

Just a couple of weeks before his passing, Mike's eyes had danced with delight when he spoke of the upcoming trip to Washington, D.C. he and Velma had planned to visit family over the 4th of July. His grandchildren certainly held special strings to his heart! The anticipation of seeing his granddaughters, Katelyn and Lauren Scott, seemed to increase by the day. He enjoyed that time spent with his family over the holiday. Upon his return he remarked that it was a wonderful visit, filled with the happiness of being together.

Mike delighted in the fact that his daughter, Jennifer and her husband Craig York and their two young sons, Wilson and James, lived in Prospect. "Pops" as he was known to them could often be seen with them, and his joy in being with them was evident. Thank you, Council Member Scott, for your selfless service and the example it set.

Ladies, Are You Prepared To

The Prospect Police Department will hold a self-defense class for women ages 14 and over on Tuesday, September 10th at 7:00 PM at City Hall. The class will focus on how residents can adjust their activities to be safer. Those attending will be provided with tactics and techniques on how to respond in the event they are accosted by someone. The class will be taught by Officer Heather Loeser. There is no cost to attend the session, but pre-registration is required in order to limit class size so that instruction can be individualized. Participants should remember to wear comfortable clothing and tennis shoes. To register, call Jill Vidito at 228-1150 during normal Business hours.

Thanks Ken!

Thank you Judge Corey! The combination of your smile and determination brought a much needed change to our city.

You join the many who have served our city in a very special way. You are, indeed, part of the fabric that makes up the City of Prospect. We wish you the best and hope to see you and to hear from you as we move forward with a renewed spirit of cooperation to maintain the unique atmosphere that is Prospect. We are proud to call you and Mary residents.

Frank Fulcher Appointed To City Council

On Monday, August 5th Prospect City Council elected Frank Fulcher to fill the vacancy on the city council; Frank was elected on the first ballot. A resident of Prospect for more than thirty two years, Frank and his wife raised their three children here in Prospect; his son and his three children also call Prospect home. Frank is retired professional engineer and corporate executive. His civic activities include membership on the Deer Study Committee and on the Nuisance Ordinance Review Committee. Frank has attended nearly every city council meeting for the past three years. He has participated, as an interested resident, in many of the council discussions over the past years, and is thus aware of many of the issues that have faced council members during that time. He will certainly not be in unfamiliar territory during council meetings.

John Le Carre' has been casting a knowing eye at the real world of wars, from the Cold War days of the Spy Who Came in from the Cold to the wars of today, where countries hire mercenaries like Halliburton to support the Iraq War and use employees of Booz Allen such as Edward Snowden instead of government employees at NSA. As Le Carre' explores brilliantly in his newest book, A Delicate Truth, the possibilities, indeed probabilities, are that those who award the contracts will profit from them. And the decent, out of the loop players pay the price in ruined careers and lives. All that sounds dismal, but this is an absorbing novel with characters one loves to hate and characters one can't resist loving and rooting for. I read this 300 page novel in one sitting, it's that good.

Many people are familiar with the “wizards” of Bletchley Park who, in World War II, broke Germany's Enigma Code.

The story is that the British ran ads in local papers, recruiting crossword puzzle fanatics and people who loved to unscramble word jumbles – a daft little band of eccentrics, few with university degrees, whose talents were particularly suited to the work they did in a country manor not unlike Downton Abbey. There are kernels of truth there, but Blackett's War by Stephen Budiansky explores another band of Brits, men with degrees in chemistry, botany, economics, physics, mathematics, whose particular talent was the ability to use their knowledge of probability theory to look at naval tactics with fresh eyes. At the beginning of the war, German U-boats were sinking a stunning percentage of merchant ships, ships that were the life-line for food, fuel, war materials, for the British Isles. Conventional naval strategy was to form small convoys (don't put all your eggs in one basket) but those outsider geniuses (some of whom later won Nobel prizes) demonstrated that the U-boats could sink only a few ships at a pass, hence, all those small convoys, cumulatively lost many more ships than a big convoy. Once they persuaded the Royal Navy to change its tactics, many more ships made the Atlantic crossing successfully. Blackett's War is a fresh look at an aspect of World War II.

World War II, that “greatest generation” war, continues to attract writers and readers. A few weeks ago, people filled the Temple on Rt 42 to overflowing to hear author Rick Atkinson discuss the last book in his trilogy about the war in the European theatre. Atkinson is not only a fine historian but a great story teller. In his first book in that trilogy, An Army at Dawn, he told of General George Patton, in such a frenzy to get to North Africa and start fighting, that he took over the loading of the transport ships. Such is the power of generals, even when they are behaving with criminal stupidity, that when our soldiers disembarked, the bullets were not stored near the rifles, the bandages were in the bottom of the ship, and we had an army stranded on shore, helpless for days until supplies were sorted out. The Guns at Last Light covers the last year of the war, beginning with D-Day and encompassing the Battle of the Bulge. That last year was no cake walk, and American casualties in the European theatre were higher than they had been in the previous years in Africa and Italy. Indeed, many units of the Allies were still fighting their way up the spine of Italy even as others crossed the English Channel on June 5. Prospective readers may feel they already “know” World War II, Tom Hanks and John Wayne having revealed it all. Not remotely true. Atkinson has added a wealth of detail...human interest, human failings, glorious chateaus used as headquarters by Allies and Germans alike, terrible privations of civilians, the incredible output of U.S. factories, seven times more trucks than Germany. The Army Corps of Engineers erected an average of ten bridges a day every day after June 6, including 71 major ones over the Meuse and the Rhine. More than 6,000 U.S. tanks rumbled over those bridges. Guns at Last Light is a big book. It is also a great one. A great war, a great people, deserve such books. ~ Sandy Tucci
